Vincent Hooper, School of Chemical Sciences

Vincent has been a member of the technical staff in the School of Chemical Sciences for the last fifteen years. In that time, he has made a huge contribution to the overall teaching and learning experience in our school, from a number of aspects. Vincent's contributions have helped in making undergraduate chemistry laboratory practicals both a stimulating and interesting experience for our undergraduate students. Vincent also makes a huge contribution to training postgraduate demonstrators of these practicals to a high standard. This is vital for delivering practical chemistry syllabi to our undergraduate students. He has made significant contributions to the Science Olympiad, EMAC, and EUSO competitions down throughout the years. Finally, Vincent's contribution to the teaching and learning of our postgraduate researchers should not be overlooked and he has also helped researchers from other departments in the Faculty of Science. In summing up, he is highly thought of by all those who know and work with him.
